

Loomis Special Services brings a spark to festival cash collections.

When a unique service provider required bespoke collections from some of the UK's largest festivals, the Loomis Special Services team rose to the challenge.

Founded in 2012 and based in Copenhagen, Volt provide a mobile charging service at 40 festivals in six countries. In the UK these include Sonisphere, T in the Park, Reading, and the Isle of Wight festival.

Customers can book a charging unit in advance of an event and use the clever gadget to top up their mobile phone. However, not all units are pre-booked, most are hired in person on the day and this means that Volt had to overcome the challenge of transporting cash from the festival site to a bank.

The team at Volt knew that the events circuit in the UK could be extremely lucrative for them, but first needed to overcome the logistical challenge of transporting their cash in a secure manner.

Co-founder Rune Schostag Nielsen, who is responsible for Volt's Business Development and Logistics, contacted Loomis to understand what could be done to support Volt with cash collections at their UK events.

Because of the nature of festival locations and the need for a bespoke collection schedule, Loomis Special Services were engaged and asked to deliver a solution.

With a wealth of experience in supporting thousands of customers with specialist transport and logistics challenges, the Special Services team worked with Rune to develop a model which met the requirements of both partners.

The resultant solution met all the necessary security processes, while making it easy for the Volt team to work with.

"It's now simple for us," says Rune.

"At the end of the festivals, the Volt team pack down and notify Loomis that they are ready. They then meet the Loomis custodians at the designated location and, following an agreed process, hand the cash over."

"This was our first year in the UK - it's gone really well. We've established a good client base and we're hoping to build on this. Loomis will be a part of this - we're really very happy with how things have gone."
